New Lenox Sewer Problem Discussed

Would you abandon your present well and sewerage system if you could have a safe water supply and an adequate sewerage system for about $2-15 a month for a family? There would be no special assessment. Your taxes would not be higher except for the small amount your property would increase in value.

You would have better fire protection with plenty water at fire hydrants. The drinking water would be safe from pollution (1-3 of our wells are unsafe). Overcrowded sewer lines would not back up in basements after heavy rains. The stench of open sewer ditches would be no more. You wouldn't need to worry about your pump breaking down. Your water would be much softer and you would use much less soap and get better results from it etc.

The natural response is when? Not until the population has increased considerably and not without a substantial Federal or state aid. If authorities are correct about the great movement of people out of the large cities after the war then five years after VJ Day would be the earliest possible time and it probably will be a little longer.

Everyone, however, should be familiar with the painless way for a small community to get these services so that we can look forward to the day without fear. As the result of a state law passed in 1934 we can acquire water and sewers and pay for them on a rental basis like electric and gas service. The figure of $2.15 is not based on the estimated cost of this service in New Lenox, but on the amounts now being paid for water and sewers in eight small Illinois communities now using the rental system (1937 report by Ill. Health Dept.). The $2.15 provides for repaying the money borrowed to pay for the systems in a period of twenty to thirty years in addition to the cost of operating the water and sewerage systems. After it is paid for the Village owns the system and can either reduce rates or use the money for other village improvements.

The State law also provides that the village government cannot arrange for putting in water and sewers under the rental system unless you vote them the right. It is not necessary to have both water and sewers installed at the same time; either can be had separately.

The first step in the direction of better water and sewers is through sponsoring a local government.

Mokena Boy Has Air View Of Devasted Germany

An Eighth Air Force Service Command Station, England—The Japan of tomorrow was mirrored in the targets of yesterday for Sgt. Robert Liess, Mokena, as he along with nine other ground crew members of the Eighth Air Force Service Command with whom he has served, flew over devastated and defeated Germany in a B17 Flying Fortress on an eight hour "sightseeing mission" to witness the great part they played in the eventual victory over Hitler's Germany.

From altitudes ranging from a couple of thousand feet to treetop level in ideal weather, the Fortress skeleton crew and its passengers saw the result of 30 months of intensive strategic bombing. The men were all "briefed" on what they would see on the flight over the Ruhr Valley which was once considered one of the most highly industrialized areas in the world. Airmen referred to it as "Flak Valley" due to the very heavy concentration of anti aircraft defenses.

The flight covered approximately 1,000 miles round trip and the men flew over parts of England, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany. The Reich's ruins, the heavily bombed marshalling yards, transportation and industrial centers, and destroyed bridges, were all given special attention on this flight.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Liess, Mokena, Sgt. Liess is stationed at this strategic air depot bomber repair base. A graduate of Joliet Township high school, he then attended Joliet Junior College. Prior to his entry into the army January 15, 1942 he operated a service station. Sgt. Liess has served overseas since September 1942.

Naughty Polly Causes A Great Deal Of Trouble

When a polly belonging to the Alvin Andres family of Tinley Park decided to explore its outdoor surroundings during the absence of the Andres family last Friday night, the parrot created a lot of excitement.

When polly was missing upon the return of the Andres family they naturally were worried about the safety of the pet.

Early Saturday morning about 5 o'clock Doris was out looking for polly, but there was no sign of the gay plumed bird. Along about 7:30 o'clock Judy Andres was overjoyed to hear the familiar voice of polly calling "O Doris" and then laughed. Upon investigation polly was found perched in a high tree in the neighboring yard.

Doris solicited the aid of Everett Willman to rescue polly. Mrs. Willman, Mrs. Bernardini and Mrs. Markenas all dressed in their house coats came over to Carr's yard to witness the rescue. Polly however flew out of the tree, circled around and finally lit on the lawn and sat down in front of Mrs. Willman but when the latter picked up polly the bird bit her three times.

Then the house coat brigade went to the Andres abode with Mrs. Willman in the lead carrying polly. Now everyone is happy the parrot is safely back in her cage.

Thunderhead

MARY O'HARA
W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Thunderhead, commonly known as the Goblin, is the only white horse ever born on the Goose Bar ranch in Wyoming. He grows from a misshapen colt to a powerful yearling, resembling his great grandsire more every day. The grandsire is a wild stallion called the Albino. One day Goblin wanders into a mountain valley, meets the Albino, and barely escapes with his life. When his wounds are healed, Ken McLaughlin, his 12-year-old owner, begins to train him. Goblin, although difficult to handle, occasionally submits, and runs with astonishing speed and endurance. Charley Sargent, millionaire horse breeder, tells Ken that Goblin might become a winning racer.

CHAPTER XIV

Ken brought his horse over the line as he had done before—the same, hard gallop, with the colt fighting his head and unwilling to obey. It made Ken mad that just now when he wanted performance Thunderhead would do nothing but fight.

All right then—let it be war. This battling with the stallion was bringing out something in the boy that had never been there before. He raised the light crop he held and brought it down on the colt's haunches as hard as he could. Thunderhead leaped in the air and tried to shake Ken off. Ken could feel the power and anger surge into his own body. He raised his arm and brought the crop down again. When the horse lit this time he was going.

It was the long floating effortless pace that had been Rocket's. Ken sat motionless on the tiny saddle. Down to the turn, around the posts, up the other side—

Nell glanced at Charley. "See that?" she said. "That's what I mean."

"And he's not even trying," said Charley in a daze.

"He's coming! He's coming!" screamed Howard. "Look at the watch—"

Sargent gave a start. He hadn't had his eyes off the colt, he hadn't timed him. He waved his arm and yelled at Ken, "Keep going! Go around again!"

Ken's eyes flickered up to him as he passed, but he didn't turn his head. There was a rapt look on his face.

"Gosh! He runs in the air!" howled Sargent. "He doesn't touch the ground!"

Howard was jumping up and down. "Keep it up! Keep it up! Thunderhead! Thunderhead!"

Nell felt hysterical. She suddenly put her face into her hands. The beauty of it. The super-performance—and Ken sitting so still—the victory at last—the two-year-long battle—the faith—the exhaustion—the cuts and bruises and strains she had to bind up—and now, Victory!

She raised her head and looked again. Coming back up the home stretch!—Coming! One long sustained yell from Sargent—and the horse over the line, Ken trying to pull him up—swinging around in circles—Howard's voice squeaking—"What did he make, Mr. Sargent? What did he make?"—while Sargent was trying to scramble down the rock.

Thunderhead had made the half-mile in forty-seven seconds. "Oh, Kennie—Kennie—" "Gee, Ken—he did it—Gee!"

"That horse! He's one of the seven wonders of the world!"

Thunderhead was fighting. He wanted to keep going. Ken had hardly come back yet from the ecstasy in which he had ridden. His glowing face with the slightly parted lips was half unconscious.

"Could he do it again? Has he ever done it before? We'll let him rest a little, then give him another spin."

"Rest?" said Howard. "He's not tired. He never gets tired. He hates to be stopped when he gets going. That's why he's mad now."

They decided to try the colt again; and again they climbed to the ledge and timed his start, and again Ken fought with him to control him, forced him over the line, and was shaken by the angry, rough gallop—by his breaking through the posts. The struggle went on—the lashing of the crop—the scarlet face of the boy, while Charley grew grave and the little group on the ledge no longer chattered with excitement, but stood silent.

At last Sargent was hopeless. "It was a fluke," he said. "He's uncontrollable."

"Look, look, Mr Sargent! He's doing it again!"

The colt had broken through his temperamental impediments. He burst into his swift, floating pace, and went streaming around the track. As he crossed the line Sargent punched the watch. They held their breath. Sargent's mouth was wide open in a crazy grin. His eyes popped.

The gelding.

For days and nights Ken had been thinking of it. The better the colt behaved, the more speed he showed, the more despair Ken felt. They told him and they argued with him, and they proved it to him. The colt would lose no iota of his speed—might even have more, because his energies would not be wasted in fighting, in running after mares, in breeding them. It made no difference to Ken. He had seen the colts before gelding, the power that flowed through them like hot lava, making them rear and play and fight and wrestle; making their tails and manes lift like flying banners; giving a look of individuality and passion to their faces—and he had seen them after. Seen the change in the carriage of the head, the look of the eye, the appearance of the colt, the general behavior.

Nothing would reconcile him. But his father had decided. What could one do in such a jam? Fortitude. When you couldn't have what you wanted, you accepted defeat with fortitude. His mother said you could pray—but you needn't think you'd get what you wanted, you'd just get the strength to bear the disappointment.

Those days made a change in Ken's face and character. He said little about it. The more you argued and pleaded the less likely his father was to yield. His mother was really on his side, but she left such things to his father. She felt that he really knew best.

It happened that on the morning of the day of Ken's trial race down on the track a call came into the office of the veterinarian at Laramie. It was from Barney, the rancher west of the Goose Bar, stating that he had a sick cow who needed to be cleaned out after a premature calving. Could Dr. Hicks come out and take care of her?

Dr. Hicks and Bill, his assistant, arrived at the Barney ranch about one o'clock. They worked over the cow for a couple of hours. When they were leaving, Dr. Hicks said, "It's only a few miles down the back road to the Goose Bar. We'll stop in there and geld those two-year-olds of Captain McLaughlin."

"How's your muscle?" asked Nell.

They arrived at the stables soon after Rob had driven off with the blacks. Gus went out with a bucket of oats and called in the colts, and the men got to work.

"Is that all?" asked Doc. When he had gelded seven. "I thought the Captain said eight."

"There's one more," said Gus, "Ken's colt. De white one."

"Oh, the throwback!" said Doc. "The one Ken thinks is going to be a racer. How's he comin' on?"

"He runs right gude now," said Gus.

"Maybe they don't want him gelded."

"De Captain wants him gelded all right. Mebbe you cud wait a little, while I go down and help Tim wid de milkin'?" Ken tuk de colt out a while back—he might be home any minnit."

Doc and Bill took seats on the corral fence and rolled cigarettes and waited.

The shadows grew longer. They heard the cowbells as the cows, after being milked, wandered out into the pasture; then the sound of the separator whirling in the milk house as it cut the milk in half, pouring a rich, foaming, white fluid into one jar, a thick yellow cream into the other.

At last Doc told Bill to pack up the stuff. They got in the car and drove away.

Ken felt almost awed when he arrived at the stables with Howard, having driven the blacks home in the "jouncing cart," and heard from Gus what had happened. There stood the seven gelded colts in the east corral, their heads hanging lifelessly, their hind legs covered with blood. Thunderhead, said Gus, had come galloping in with Touch And Go some ten minutes after Doc had left. He had unsaddled him and turned them both out into the home pasture.

Ken stared at the geldings while the blood rushed through his body and sank again. This meant—this meant—Doc had made his trip to the ranch! His father would never order him up again to geld one colt!

Ken leaped in the air with a whoop of triumph.

"Gosh!" said Howard. "You're shot in the head with luck!"

So Thunderhead was not gelded.

A year before, the Albino had recognized in Thunderhead a reflection of himself in miniature. But gelding would have changed that. It would have left the colt, perhaps, a successful racer; it would have made him more useful to men and amenable to their demands; but never again would he have been a creature who could have commanded the notice of his royal great grandfather.

Nell had hardly recovered from the emotion she had felt when she saw Ken's triumph. And the fact that the colt had escaped gelding (for Rob had said that since Doc had come and gone he could wait another year) gave her an even stranger feeling of unreality. When obstacles vanished, they just floated away—as if they never had been—

"He is going to be a racer after all, isn't he, dad?"

"Looks like it, son."

"And all our troubles will be over."

"What are you going to do with all the money, Ken?"

"He's going to pay back a lot that he owes me!"

"And he can pay for his own education!"

"And pay off the note on the ranch."

"And put wooden fences around it—he's promised me that!"

Mother, you've got to tell me what you want! I've asked you and asked you and you never have."

"Can I have three wishes?"

"Yes—three things. Make them big things, mother!"

"I want a swan sleigh all covered with bells! I want a monkey tree! And I want a little girl!"

"What is a monkey tree?" asked Charlie.

"It's a kind of big old pine tree here on the ranch—there are only a couple of dozen of them," Howard explained. "We were looking at one one day long ago—They are a queer shape with branches all twisting every which way, and mother said it had a face like an old monkey's."

"Mother," insisted Ken, "tell me some other wishes—real wishes that I could get you."

"He wants to buy her joo-oo-ools!" clowned Howard.

"Better cross your fingers, Ken," said Charley. "Many a slip betwixt the cup and the lip, you know—"

In the interchange of talk and flashing glances that played around the table, Nell's look crossed Rob's. They stared a moment. She felt the impact of his animosity. He hadn't forgiven her for what she had said last night. When they were alone together, he was smooth and easy—as if it were forgotten—but with people around, he lowered his guard and let her see the truth.

While they argued as to whether it would be better for Thunderhead to be raced this coming fall or wait until he was a three-year-old, and decided on the latter, she sat at the end of the table, feeling all her elation dying down. Thunderhead's success began to seem very remote—indeed, unlikely. No. The odds were, nothing would come of it. The colt had, apparently, run a half-mile faster than it had ever been run before. Could that be true? According to recorded runs, yes. But there were many colts in the world besides those who ran in races—many colts who had been clocked on makeshift tracks like this one who might have—must have, broken records, and yet, for one reason or another, never were heard of. Why? Things happened. They got hurt, or stale, or proved a flash in the pan, or unmanageable—

"For you see," said Charley, "we know now he's got it in him. It's there. But he's an unmanageable brute. He can't be depeped on. He needs a lot of training and discipline. Besides, he hasn't got his growth yet. In another year, when he's settled down, he'll be unbeatable!"

He gave Ken's back a resounding whack! "Young fellow, me lad, you'll have a winner! How'll it feel to be the famous owner of a famous horse?"

But Ken had a thought. "Suppose," he said lugubriously, "we get him all trained for a race, and then he runs away and we can't find him?"

Rob glanced at Ken, then at Nell. His expression was sardonic. "Ken, you take after your mother more than any boy has a right to."

Nell's eyes met Rob's—and clashed again. She looked down and finished her sliced peaches. What was the matter with him? It wasn't only the quarrel of last night—that had left him hard and cold toward her, but now he was in a state—had been all evening—ever since—ever since he arrived at the race track in that ridiculous cart—what had he been doing before—Oh, yes, he went out on Gypsy—went out on Gypsy to see Bellamy and ask if he was going to take the lease again this fall—Ah!

She put down her spoon and sat motionless, staring a hole through the table—her mind rushed forward.

Charley was shouting that with a horse of such potential value as Thunderhead, they would never dream of putting him out on the range that winter?

GOD'S PURPOSE FOR ABRAHAM

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 12:1-9.
GOLDEN TEXT—In thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.—Genesis 12:3.

Separation, which means release from the influence of those things which hinder full development, is a blessing even though it may be difficult. God had a great purpose in mind for Abram, but to accomplish it He had to get him out of his own country, away from the downward pull of heathendom, and out into a new adventure of faith with Him.

Down in the midst of those who worshiped the heavenly bodies was a man who had found that there was no satisfaction for his soul in such worship. He had found the true God, and was ready to respond to His call. We find Abram

I. Hearing God's Call (vv. 1-3).

Men who have been used to accomplish great and good things in the world have, like Abraham, been willing to step out into the dark. They have not foreseen greatness nor even striven for it, but have gone out at God's call, obeying Him day by day, and He has been responsible for the outworking of their destiny.

How important it is to have the listening ear, and the obedient heart. He was attentive to God's word, and willing to take Him at His word.

Abram was strongly attached to his homeland. He was a man of such strength of character and obvious ability, that he undoubtedly held a place of real importance in his own country. To leave that and go out to an unknown destination (Heb. 11:8) called for real faith—and Abram had it!

God had a purpose in calling him out—the establishment of a great nation. Through Abram all the nations of the earth were to be blessed. That stupendous eventuality hung in the balance until he decided to obey God, and we are glad he did.

When God takes anything from us, we can be sure that He is planning a greater blessing to take its place. Material loss often brings spiritual blessing. Separation from family may give a broader relationship to others. Sacrifice for the Lord's service brings hundredfold returns (Matt. 19:29).

II. Responding to God's Command (vv. 4-6).

As the Lord spoke, so Abram departed. He was to be the channel of God's blessing, and he put himself in God's hand for His use. The lives of each of us may, in our own way, be the channels of God's blessings to those round about us; but only if we, like Abram, respond to His call.

The migration of Abram from Chaldea to Canaan is one of the most important events in all history. It was one of the grand turning points in the story of the human race.

The fact that Abram took with him his entire family into the promised land, reminds us that we are not to go alone into the Lord's heavenly kingdom. We are to take our families with us.

Note also that Abram brought his substance, his riches, with him. That tells us anew that when a man comes into the household of God through Jesus Christ, he is to bring his purse with him. Consecrate your substance as well as yourself and your service to God.

The journey of Abram ended (v. 6) in what is said to be the most beautiful spot in all of Palestine—but even here difficulty faced him, for "the Canaanite was then in the land."

Even so, the Christian life is not one of ease and idleness, but of heroic endeavor and victory. The Promised Land is a type, not of heaven, but of the Christian's life and experience. We, too, find the Canaanite in the land. There is a constant struggle with the world, the flesh and the devil; but there is victory in Christ.

III. Receiving God's Blessing (vv. 7-9).

God kept His promise to Abram. True he did not see the entire fulfillment of it, but is that necessary to the man of faith? God says it, we believe it; it becomes our present possession by faith, though the enjoyment of it may be yet to come.

Note that wherever Abram pitched his tent, he built an altar. He was not too hurried or busy to remember God. We, too, are pilgrims and strangers in this world. Let us not fail to raise an altar to God. Whenever we may be, let us leave a testimony for Him.

For such a man, God could well have a high purpose. He was among that noble company who in all ages have "simply obeyed each day the divine orders which were given them, took each day the way of prayer, of righteousness, of duty; content if they had light enough for that and the next step, leaving to a higher will all that should come after. And God charged Himself with their destiny" (J. G. Greenough).

WBA NEWS

The annual family picnic of the WBA was held at the Tinley Creek Grove Sunday, July 8.

While the younger generation played baseball and marbles, the "older set" concentrated on pinocle which resulted in Mary Isreals walking off with first prize. Some of the men showed almost professional style in pitching horseshoes and a lot of them are probably still sorry they played baseball.

The crowd consisted of the Lee Bacon family, Mario Bernardini family, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Isreals, Vernon Isreals and their guest Diane, the Arthur Johnsons, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sayre with "Buddy" and their guests Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. West and daughter Charlotte, Mrs. Harold Thomas and daughter Janet, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Janiet, Everette and June. The "good" committee awarded everyone young and old a gift. That committee, by the way was Mrs. Mary Isreals and Mrs. Hilda Johnson.

The food? Fine, of course.

—June Willman, Press Cor.

The Saturday Evening pinocle club of Tinley Park, Frankfort and Mokena will go to Cedar Lake for a picnic this Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Mehren and sons were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wise of Frankfort Sunday, in honor of their daughter's birthday.

1st Lt. John Gotham arrived in Tinley Park Monday after being honorably discharged from the Army on the point system. He has been in service five years and overseas three years. He wears the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal and 5 stars the Presidential Citation. He is visiting with his wife in Louisville, Kentucky and plans to make his home in Tinley Park.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 8, was:

"SACRAMENT"

The Golden Text was:

"As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come" (1 Cor. 11: 26).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples. Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. . . . But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore; but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus. . . . As soon then as they were come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread. . . . Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord" (John 21: 2-4, 9, 12).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:

"What a contrast between our Lord's last supper and his last spiritual breakfast with his disciples in the bright morning hours at the joyful meeting on the shore of the Galilean Sea! . . . This spiritual meeting with our Lord in the dawn of a new light is the morning meal which Christian Scientists commemorate. They bow before Christ, Truth, to receive more of his reappearing and silently to commune with the divine Principle, Love. They celebrate their Lord's victory over death, his probation in the flesh after death, its exemplification of human probation, and his spiritual and final ascension above matter, or the flesh, when he rose out of material sight" (pp. 34, 35).

TINLEY PARK

Richard C. Heath, 19, S 1-c USNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Heath of Tinley Park, fights aboard a heavy cruiser, off Okinawa, whose big guns have helped smash Japanese resistance on Okinawa by blasting remaining enemy pillboxes and artillery installations into twisted piles of concrete and rubble.

Nearly four weeks ago this cruiser moved into position to take its turn at bombarding the plateaus and ridges of the formidable island bastion. As enemy resistance subsided, she moved in close to the barren beaches to afford point blank range to her 8 in. guns.

Every man has been at his battle station during most of the operation and men on the anti-aircraft batteries have been at their guns more than 400 hours. Their only respite has been an occasional nap atop ammunition ready boxes, or against splinter shields or the housing of their gun turrets.

While bombarding the enemy, the ship has had its share of enemy aircraft attacks and the log has many new notes on enemy planes shot down.

Railroads Need Additional Employees

American railroads must have 90,000 additional employees immediately if they are to accomplish their military redeployment mission, Col. I. Sewell Morris, chairman of the Western Railroad Urgency Committee, announced.

Maj. Gen. David McCoach, Jr., commanding general of the Sixth Service Command, in a recent address pointed out that the speed with which redeployment is accomplished has a direct bearing on the length of the Japanese war. The general said, "It is our job here in the United States to transport the soldiers and supplies to the place where they are needed. If we do our part of the job, our men in the Pacific will do theirs. The more we send, the faster the end, and the faster the end, the fewer soldiers we must expend."

Since the start of the war, more than 300,000 trained railroad workers have entered military service. At least part of this personnel shortage must be met if the railroads are now to do the job the army demands, Col. Morris said.

Present plans for switching troops now in Europe and in American training camps call for 20,000,000 man trips, the largest traffic burden in history, to be superimposed on normal, necessary civilian travel.

Men and women, skilled and unskilled labor are needed now by the railroads. All railroads currently have programs for training inexperienced workers in skills necessary in railroading.

R. T. Taylor, regional director of the Railroad Retirement Board, which acts as employment agent for all railroads, pointed out today that there are no temporary railroad jobs since an employee's seniority starts the day he is hired. Mr. Taylor said persons who obtain railroad employment now have good prospects of post war employment. All railroad workers are covered by the provisions of the Railroad Retirement Act passed by Congress in 1937.

A Centralized Traffic Control operator... who may be 200 miles away... by flipping a few tiny levers, "throws the switches" and puts a fast train on the left-hand track to pass a slower train. Both trains keep moving... all traffic is speeded.

Control centers of this type are located on the ROCK ISLAND at several points, on lines where traffic is heaviest. Indicator lights on the operator's switchboard tell him at all times the exact position of each train in his "section." He plans and arranges "cross-overs" and "passings" that will move the trains with greatest speed. Wayside signals and signal lights within the engine cab keep the engineer informed.

Centralized Traffic Control... which makes two tracks do the work of three... enables us to handle an ever greater volume of freight.

Better railroading is the creed on the ROCK ISLAND LINES. Through continual improvements we move forward on our never-ending Program of Planned Progress. As yesterday—and today—so tomorrow, ROCK ISLAND'S sole purpose is to provide the finest in transportation.

ROCK ISLAND'S "TRAFFIC CONTROL" . . . 1852 STYLE
The first Rock Islanders had to do it the hard way. The candle lantern shown here is typical of the equipment of 93 years ago. Feeble candle light, showing through tiny slots in the metal lantern, provided the only means of signaling at night. Today's Centralized Traffic Control, and ROCK ISLAND'S experiments in electronic communication, offer sharp contrast to the meager methods of yesterday's railroading.

EVERETT J. COOPER, Notary Public

RECENT outpourings of the populace at large have shown one thing beyond all argument. The public would rather have a contest—than class.

For example, big league baseball has lost over 400 of its best men to war service—such players as Dickey, Gordon, Chandler, Walker, Cooper, Joe DiMaggio, Tex Hughson, Bob Feller—on and on and on.

Thousands thought that the absence of these stars would turn away the crowds. But the closer and more interesting pennant races have more than filled out the long lines at the turnstiles.

Grantland Rice

You may recall the old days when the Yankees were 18 games in front around July or early August. In those days the American league pennant race was over just about when it started. There was no contest. Last season the Cardinals had the National league race practically won back in April. Once again—no contest.

The recent derbies have had no Johnstown, Whirlaway or Count Fleet. But they offered contests—and brought out the greatest crowds in racing history as far as the United States is concerned. The public wants to see a good rough and tumble scrap for the top—an interesting turmoil where more than one can win. Even with the cold, wet weather of May and early June, the crowds have proved this point in baseball.

A Different Boom

The new sporting boom, now getting under way, is entirely different from the boom that followed the First World War. That was the boom and the era of stars—known as the Golden Age of sport.

This new boom will be all different. In the first place, it will have far more contestants through the army and navy sporting program. In the second place, it will all out-class those days in the matter of public interest and public attendance. For us this has been a far rougher and more devastating war than the first world upheaval knew. Then we went to war in April, 1917, and we were through in November, 1918. That was only a sprint by comparison. But this war began in December, 1941, and it is still going full blast. The casualty list of this war will triple the casualty list of the number one affair.

The tremendous sports program which army and navy are working on is dead sure to bring in a star crop of baseball players, football players and boxers from the younger set.

"These army and navy ball players will have the advantage of good training and fit condition," Carl Hubbell says. "That can make a big difference. Also there ought to be enough to go around so that all of us can improve."

Dave Ferriss and Al Benton have proved Hubbell's slant. Coaches Greasy Neale and Steve Owen feel the same way about it in regard to football. So do the college coaches who expect to get their share of these veterans.

Commissioner Chandler has promised to give thousands of extra kids a chance to play baseball who have been shut out before through lack of playing space. It has already been proven clearly that this country needs more players than it needs extra spectators. This idea may not strike every promoter as a happy thought, but it will be that way in the future.

In the meanwhile the first rush of the boom is already here. The ball parks are proving it.

Major Test Case

Hank Greenberg will be 35 years old on January 1, 1946. He has been out of baseball action four seasons and before he moved into war service he had known 10 years of big league service. From now on Tiger Hank's play will be followed with greater interest than the performance of any other player now in baseball. This not only includes every baseball fan, but also every veteran service athlete who hopes to return to some form of sport.

Joe Louis and Billy Conn are notable examples. So are many other boxers—many other ball players—and many other football stars. Greenberg at least will give us part of the answer as to what four years of athletic inaction will do.

I talked with the tall captain just before he was given his army release. Weighing 195 pounds, he looked fit for anything.

"I only wish I knew the answer," he said, "but I believe I have at least two more seasons left in my system. It will take a little time to get going again, to get my eye on the ball. I hope not too long. But I am in good shape physically, although my legs will need some seasoning. It will be good to get back in time to have at least a chance to pick up the old game. Another year would have been too late."

WAR'S GREATEST SAGA

When the final history of the war is told, one of its greatest chapters will describe that branch of the service totally new to war—the Air Transport command. Transporting prime ministers and presidents, wounded men, jeeps and Pat Hurley's Cadillac over oceans and deserts has now become commonplace news to the American public. But behind that commonplace news is a thrilling story of painstaking, back-breaking pioneering.

Here are some things few people know about the Air Transport command:

Most used air route in the world is not between Washington and New York, not between New York and Chicago, but over "The Hump" between China and India. . . . Traffic over this world's highest mountain range, the Himalayas, is so heavy that planes travel at different altitudes so there will be no collisions. One plane will have orders to fly at 22,000 feet, another at 23,000, and so on. Three or four different air routes are used across the Hump, also to avoid collisions.

Next most heavily used air route is across the North Atlantic. The ATC sends a plane across the Atlantic every 58 seconds. That's about as fast as traffic moves on the Pennsylvania railroad between New York and Philadelphia, busiest rail line in the world. . . . The ATC is now flying returning troops across the Atlantic at a rate of 50,000 per month. . . . For years, ATC pilots have been briefed on how to land on the difficult airports of Greenland, Iceland or China. Now the ATC has the tremendous thrill of briefing pilots on arriving at home ports—Boston, Portland, Long Island. . . . Pilots say that no briefing was ever more welcome.

From Battle Fronts.

More than 220,000 wounded men have been carried in ATC planes away from the battle front. During the early stages of Okinawa fighting, planes swooped down on makeshift runways, taxied up to ambulances, took off right under the noses of Jap guns. Stretchers were loaded aboard while the planes refueled. . . . One big ATC job has been getting crashed fliers out of the Himalayas. Amazing fact is that 75 per cent are saved. . . . Lt. Gen. Harold George, boss of the ATC, realized in advance that crashes would be heavy over the Hump, so men were given special training on how to live in the jungles. They were even taken to jungle outposts to get familiar with the jungle before they hopped. . . . Every plane flying the Hump has a small tin chest (with its own parachute) containing medicine, snake-bite, antidote, water purifier, concentrated food, signal flares, mirrors, mosquito nets, etc. This chest is kept near the plane's door. If the crew has to jump, the chest is kicked out before the last man leaves the plane. . . . In the jungle, crews are taught to stay where they are until sighted by rescue planes which signal instructions as to where they can be picked up. . . . Natives are usually friendly and the chances of getting rescued from the jungle are far better than if a flier drops over the desert or in the sea.

Japs Shot Down Many.

The Japs shot down many ATC planes early in the war by painting their DC-4s with U. S. insignia. . . . Flying up close, the Japs waited until they had perfect targets, then fired. . . . U. S. planes had to be repainted.

Before Pearl Harbor, Roosevelt ordered special fighter planes rushed to the British in Egypt where Rommel had General Montgomery's back to the wall. . . . However, fighter planes couldn't make the long trek across Africa without refueling and there was no airport in the heart of the continent. . . . One day an American engineer was dropped off a plane almost in the center of Africa, in French territory not far from the Sudan. He had his pockets stuffed with money, and his head stuffed with ideas. That was about all. He also had instructions to build an airport. . . . Six weeks later the ATC came back and he had a 4,500-foot sodded runway in fairly good shape. He had drafted most of the camels and most of the natives in that part of Africa and paid them plenty to do the job. Fighter planes immediately began crossing to the Egyptian front and the British army staged its comeback. . . . Today the French are making diplomatic inquiries as to this airport, apparently with a view to taking it over.

Fifty Million Letters.

Fifty million letters were flown by the ATC to Europe in April. This peak load has now dropped off due to troop transfers out of Europe, but the ATC has been the largest mail carrier in history. . . . Also it runs the world's largest hotel chain. It must be prepared to handle 1,000 men a night at Natal, Brazil, also feed them. ATC hotels are scattered all over the world to handle ferrying and combat pilots. . . . When the weather is bad, hotel facilities overflow.

Season for Winter Cover Crops Nears

Wider Use of Soil Improvements Sought

Winter cover crops are among the busiest workers on American farms. Beginning about September 1, they provide feed for livestock, hold the soil against erosion, aid land to absorb moisture, and when turned under in the spring, increase the soil's supply of essential elements.

Government reports show that the planting of cover crops is especially important in the east central and southern states. The South, within a single decade, increased its acreage under cover from a few hundred thousand to several million acres. There is still room for more cover crops, however.

Postwar farming profits, as well as production of food, fiber and oil crops essential to victory in the Pacific, depend to no small degree upon the added fertility, reduced erosion and increased production of cash crops derived from the use of a winter cover for the soil. That means more winter legumes such as Austrian winter pea, hairy vetch, smooth vetch, crimson clover, burclover and sour-clover, and more ryegrass, alfalfa, kudzu and lespedeza.

While rotations of crops depend upon climate, location and type of soil, once a farm has a well-planned cover crop program, the benefits will make themselves increasingly felt.

Nutrition Knowledge

Cuts Loss of Calves

Farmers would lose fewer calves if they had a better understanding of a few simple principles of calf nutrition, according to a report of the American Veterinary Medical association.

In the field of minerals, salt, iodine, calcium and phosphorus are the ones to be watched most carefully. Salt and iodine deficiencies can be prevented by including 1 per cent of iodized salt in the grain mixture, and offering iodized salt free-choice. Calcium and phosphorus deficiencies can be avoided by including 1 per cent of calcium and phosphorus supplements in the grain mixture. If whole or skim milk is fed at the rate of 12 pounds per day, no calcium or phosphorus is needed.

Beef and Dairy Cows

Selected for Type

While it is essential that the characteristics of the breed be understood, the temperament, capacity, mammary system, health,

The body form of the dairy cow should be wedge-shaped while that of the beef animal is rectangular, as shown.

breed record as well as market demands, must play an important part in selection of beef or dairy cattle.

Generally the dairy cow will have a good type if she is much wider in the hooks or pinbones and narrow down to a sharp, fine point at the withers or top of her shoulders.

Produce Quality Hay

Tests conducted at the Wyoming experiment station indicates that the maximum yield of digestible nutrients of hay is dependent upon the stage at which hay is cut. Alfalfa should be cut when one-tenth in bloom. Timothy and grass hays should be cut when the plant is in full bloom. Leaves or grass or alfalfa hay carry the heaviest portion of nutrients, so every attempt should be made to harvest hay when it will retain the leaves.

Portrait of an American:

After the last war, an American army officer stated that it was a tragic error not to force Germany to fight a decisive battle on its own soil. He believed that the Germans would interpret the armistice as a tactical victory, saving them from disaster, and begin preparations for another war. The army officer pointed out: "The Germans must be beaten on their own ground. Their own fatherland must be conquered and their military spirit broken before they will settle down as a peaceful people." . . . Of course, his convictions turned out to be correct. . . . Gen. Eisenhower.

Eisenhower's amazing foresight cannot be overestimated. One of his biographers spins the following yarn to illustrate that attribute: One day when the General was not so prominent he arrived at Abilene, Kansas, and sputtered with indignation. He had just gotten off a train, which must have been full of isolationists. He was boiling mad over the apathy of our people. He said people ought to learn what the hell was going on; that Japan had been preparing for war for ten years and was going to jump on us one of these days.

The general's mother named him Dwight because she disliked the shortening of boys' names. It annoyed her when her son Arthur was called Art and her son Edgar was called Ed. She believed there was no short cut for Dwight. . . . However, when Dwight grew up, he was nicknamed Ike. . . . But the grand lady disclaims all knowledge of the nickname. When anyone asks her about Ike she blandly asks: "Ike?"

Gen. Eisenhower never made any secret of the fact that he despises bigotry. And it must never be forgotten that the first Eisenhower to come to America were refugees. They came here to escape religious persecution in Germany. . . . Eisenhower's glorious contribution to preserving our liberty is the most lethal reply to the bigots who would deny refugees the right to seek asylum in the U. S. A. . . . America would never have the aid of his great leadership—if his forefathers weren't allowed to enter America.

Seemingly insignificant events in the lives of great men play vital roles in world history. Eisenhower was anxious to go to Annapolis. But because he was a few months over age he decided to become a West Pointer.

Among little known facts about Eisenhower is that he is a handy man with a skillet. He enjoys concocting tasty dishes for friends. Of course, his best culinary job was cooking the Nazi goosestep.

Before Eisenhower left for Europe to take up his duties as Allied Supreme Commander, he said to Gen. Marshall: "General, I haven't had time to thank you yet."

Marshall replied: "Don't try to thank me. You go over and do the job and we'll have cause to thank you."

Pen-portraits about Gen. Ike always include this yarn: Some years ago when he was on duty in Panama he casually remarked to a friend: "This is a fine day to have your appendix removed." . . . Asked whether it had been troubling him, he replied: "No, I don't even know I have an appendix, but it might rear up and put me out of action some time when things aren't so quiet."

Eisenhower's knack of inspiring the feeling of comradeship with the men who worked and fought with him made the Allies an unbeatable team. His informality is a priceless asset of his leadership. For example, when the Allies invaded Africa he sent this note to Gen. Patton: "Dear George: Algiers has been ours for two days. Our defenses crumbling rapidly with Navy shore batteries surrendering. Only tough nut to crack is in your hand. Crack it open quickly. (Signed) Ike." . . . Patton did just that.

The general's history-making deeds speak most eloquently of his devotion to America. But when asked about his views on democracy, he answered succinctly: "Democracy? Look what it has done for me. Took me off a Kansas farm; gave me the best education in the world; gave me a chance to make a career for myself."

One of Eisenhower's strongest and most appealing characteristics is his deep and sincere humility. When his home town, Abilene, was celebrating "Eisenhower Day" some time ago, he sent this cable to his fellow citizens there: "If you folks try to high-hat me and call me by titles instead of Dwight when I come home, I shall feel like a stranger. The worst part of military rank is its loneliness. I wish I could be home with the old gang at the cafe!"

To Harriman There Was To Be Time for Thinking

Railroad Magnate E. H. Harriman expected his employees to work hard. That's why it almost gave one of his assistants heart failure when the multimillionaire, without warning, walked into his office and found the man sitting idle. The culprit had been sprawling comfortably in his chair, his feet on the desk and a fat cigar in his face. At the sight of Harriman the employe briskly jumped to his feet, at the same time mentally shedding plenty of tears over his lost job.

"That's perfectly all right. Remain seated," urged the nabob. "I'm delighted to see that you take time out to think."

What Bait One 10-Foot Earthworm Would Make

It's no fairy story--earthworms in Australia actually reach a length of more than 10 feet. These pink giants of the worm world are said to resemble closely a slender rubber hose.

The worm lives in damp or muddy soil, and its movements in its subterranean home produce a gurgling noise that may easily be heard several yards from its tunnel opening. The bizarre monsters are quite harmless, Australian natives say.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!
